Vincent didn’t want to do his homework one afternoon and was being disruptive to others. A Y staff member asked Vincent why he wasn’t working and he said that he didn’t think he could do it because it was too hard. After asking him to teach her how to do a math problem, Vincent created his own problem on the board and showed the staff member how to do it. She snuck a look at Vincent’s homework and wrote one of the problems on the board. He showed her how to do the problem and finished it himself. When he realized he had just solved one of his homework problems, Vincent excitedly finished the rest of his assignment.

Vincent continuously works hard on his math homework and now has confidence that he can learn to solve the most difficult problems.
